

Per the Department of Criminal Justice: “Hispanic” is not defined as a race. Persons of Hispanic heritage are members of the ethnic groups based in the Spanish-speaking regions of Central America, South America, the Caribbean Ocean, and Europe. Hispanic people may consider themselves both Black and Hispanic, for example. Phrases like “Black Hispanic” or “White Hispanic” describe a person by both race and ethnicity. In the event an arrestee is not forthcoming regarding their ethnic origin, arresting authorities may rely on officer observation to determine the ethnicity of the offender.
